

Lesson 28 Questions

How is javascript different than php?

What html attribute would you use to “listen” for the user to move their mouse over an element?

What html attribute would you use to “listen” for the user to move their mouse off of an element?

What html attribute would you use to “listen” for the user click on an element?

In Javascript, when do you use a single equal sign (=)?

In Javascript, when do you use a double equal sign (==)?

Is Javascript case sensitive?

What is the purpose of the document.getElementById() function?

What does the word “this” mean in Javascript?

`` exists in an html page. What would the following Javascript would do:
`document.getElementById('content').style.backgroundColor= '#FFFFFF';`

Generally, when do you use parenthesis in Javascript? **()

Generally, when do you use curly braces in Javascript? **{ }

Generally, when do you use a semicolon in Javascript? **;

Generally, when is it useful to use variables in Javascript?

In an if statement, what does != mean?

Explain the following two lines of code:

```
var player = "Jake";
var score = 10;
```